The Sales Call

How to close — step by step

The Secret: You're not selling a website. You're selling more phone calls. The site is just the mechanism. Frame everything around that.

The 30-Minute Call Structure

PHASE	TIME	WHAT TO DO	GOAL
1. Shut Up & Ask	0–15 min	Ask discovery questions. Don't pitch. Just listen and take mental notes on the number — what a new customer is worth to them.	Find their pain + their number
2. Reflect It Back	15–17 min	Summarize what they told you in 2 sentences. "So right now people can't find you, and when they do there's no clear way to call you — that's probably costing you a handful of jobs a month."	Make them feel understood
3. Show the Demo	17–22 min	Open teamground.work and pull up their industry demo. "This is the kind of thing we'd build for you." Don't explain how it works. Let them look.	Visual proof without tech talk
4. One Simple Offer	22–27 min	"We build the whole thing for $1,800. Monthly hosting and maintenance is $150 — that covers updates, security, everything. Most clients are live in two weeks."	State price then STOP TALKING
5. Handle & Close	27–30 min	First person to speak after the price loses. Wait. Then handle the objection and close with: "Want me to send over a simple agreement so we can get started?"	Get a yes or a real objection

Discovery Questions to Ask

QUESTION	WHY YOU'RE ASKING IT
"How do most of your customers find you right now?"	Reveals if they have any online presence at all and what's working.
"When someone finds you online, what do you want them to do?"	Gets them to say 'call me' — which is exactly what a site does for them.
"What does your best customer look like?"	Helps you frame the site around attracting that specific person.

"What's the average job worth to you?"	This is THE number. A plumber at $600/job needs 3 extra jobs to ROI the site.
"What would 5 extra jobs a month mean for the business?"	They do the math themselves. Now the site sounds cheap.
"Have you tried getting online before? What happened?"	Surfaces past objections (nephew built it, Wix, etc.) before they become excuses.

Objection Handling

OBJECTION	YOUR RESPONSE	NOTES
"That's more than I expected."	"What were you thinking? Let's see if we can work with that."	Drop to $1,200 if needed. Keep the monthly. The monthly is what matters long term.
"I need to think about it."	"What's the main thing you're unsure about?"	Never let them leave without surfacing the real objection. "Think about it" means something specific.
"My nephew can build it."	"Does he do it for other businesses professionally? If something breaks at 11pm, you call us – not him."	Don't trash the nephew. Just highlight accountability and reliability.
"I already have a website."	"Can I take a quick look? A lot of sites look fine but aren't actually set up to get calls."	Pull it up on your phone. Find one real issue. Don't pile on — one is enough.
"I can just use Wix/GoDaddy."	"You could. Would you do your own plumbing?"	Short. Let it land. Don't over-explain.

ROI FRAMING THAT WORKS

Plumber: avg job $600. Site brings 3 extra calls/month = $1,800/mo new revenue. Site pays itself in one month.

Landscaper: avg contract $2,500. One new client covers the whole build fee. Monthly is covered by one mow.

Restaurant: one table of 4 at $80 covers a week of hosting. Frame everything this way.

PROTECT YOUR TIME

Define exactly: how many pages, 2 rounds of revisions, what 'done' looks like. Put it in writing before you start.

Content bottleneck: charge $200 delay fee after 2 weeks waiting on photos/copy. Tell them upfront.

Host everything on your Netlify. If they cancel, they pay to migrate off. Standard practice.
